1. On 5 October 1951, the number of soldiers in the barracks installation at Bad Friedenwald was increased by 200.
2. On 11 October, a train which came from the direction of Magdeburg was unloaded at Meinsdorf railroad station. It carried trucks of the 7th Guards Tank Division. On 12 October, two trains carrying trucks of the same unit were unloaded at Meinsdorf.
3. On 12 October, advance parties left Lieberose.
4. The materiel which arrived at Frankfurt/Oder from the south between 12 and 18 October included 21 heavy tanks and SP guns and trucks of the 7th Guards Mechanized Division. This materiel also included 27 trucks with AA guns which may have belonged to the 32nd AAA Division.
5. Preparations for the evacuation of the Wittstock manoeuvre area have been observed since 10 October. Tanks were loaded on trains at the Dranse railroad station before 17 October. The main and secondary roads in the Schweinrich-Pritzwalk area were blocked to civilian traffic by Russian military personnel on 17 and 18 October.
6. On 12 October, 11 heavy tanks were unloaded from a train at Neuruppin. One train carrying troops of the First Mechanized Division stood in the Neuruppin railroad station on 13 October. This train later went toward Neustadt. Six troop trains allegedly passed through Neuruppin during the night of 13 October. On 15 October, 17 heavy tanks were loaded onto a train in Altruppin for shipment toward Neustadt. On 13 October, one train carrying tanks of the 12th Guards Tank Division passed through Neuruppin at 1015 hours and went toward Neustadt. At the same time, another train was loaded with 19 tanks in Neuruppin. On 18 October, a train which carried tanks was unloaded at Krennm railroad station.
7. On 16 October, two troop trains carrying tanks, vehicles and equipment were seen at Heiligenkrabe railroad station. They appeared to have been loaded there.

Comment: The above information supports the previous assumption that units of the Soviet army were leaving their troop-training grounds and were returning to their home stations by 15 October. Some units apparently conducted combined-arms exercises on their way to these stations. The destination of the trains which passed through Neuruppin could not be determined.
